

communique

From pictograph drawings to the first printing press nearly 600 years ago, we are now well into the third great age of communication. The digital revolution has united with TV and radio to flood us with a boundless sea of information.

For some, it's been a brave new world. To others, using podcasts and e-zines and video conferencing has always been just a part of life.

The media explosion can be tremendous for getting quickly to what you want or need.

But challenging for any company or organisation competing for attention.

So any interface with an audience needs to more than tell. It must be telling, sure to connect and hold and influence. That goes for the whole package – thinking, text, design and fulfilment...

Five things about us worth knowing

- We started in an 1850s town house in 1991, with years of experience in leading companies and ad agencies
- About 200 clients have used us on an ongoing basis or for one-off help
- We're as happy working for an SME as the big boys like Kellogg's or AstraZeneca
- Several of the media we've written and produced have picked up awards
- Expertise in European languages has been of special benefit to some clients

Think we could help you? Let's talk about it...
